The night was without incident. Late and early-so frequently that he could have slept but little-the President was in and out of the sick chamber. Mrs. Dimmick did most of the watching, but the President was never away for any length of time. Morning brought with it nothing on which hope could be founded and it was the general impression that before daylight again faded into darkness the lovable woman who has been mistress of the Executive Mansion for nearly four years would have gone to her reward.

There was scarcely a sound heard all over the house today. At the door the ushers silently opened it, and visitors crossing the tiled vestibule walked noiselessly across it. Upstairs in the offices the same dead stlence reigned. On Saturday all the offices, halls and stairway were BARRLY ALIVE AT 11 O'CLOCK.

At 11 o'clock Dr. Gardner said Mrs. Harrison was barely alive. She has passed the stage where nourishment could be administered, have where nourishment could be administered, having received the last, a little liquid stimulant, at about midnight. Since then the nurse and physician had been able to do nothing more than to moisten the lips with stimulant. Shortly before 8 o'clock Dr. Gardner reached the house and remained at the bedside of the patient until 9:30. As he left he stated that it served to him impossible.

She could still recognize her surroundings and a glance of recognition greeted the physician when he entered the sick room this morning. The fatal cough was present, but naturally in the enfeebled state of the invalid it was not pronounced. SIGHTSERRS FIND THE DOOR CLOSED.

Notwithstanding the publicity given to the fact that Mrs. Harrison was near to death there was the usual rush to the house of curious sightseers, for whose thoughtless conduct the only excuse to be offered is that they are strangers in the city. Although the house was closed to them they did not appear to realize the fact until they entered the portice and were confronted at the door of the main entrance with two signs, conspicuously placed, each bearing the single word "Closed." A DAY OF GREAT SORROW.

The family were early gathered in the room adjacent to the sick chamber, and when informed that Mrs. Harrison's condition showed no unexpected change repaired to the dining room. After breakfast the President returned to the bedside of his wife, from which he has been absent the last few days but long chough to obtain absolutely needed rest, and the others went out on the piazzant the south side of the house for a breath of fresh air. When thus refreshed the sad vigil which they have so long maintained was resumed.

It is patient as comformed in the room adjacent, and it was due to his disoncurred. Had he remained at Penceyd a minute or two longer the loss of nearly a dozen lives and the injuring of nearly a score of persons would have been averted.

Both locomotives were badly wrecked and both tracks were blocked. In addition portions of the wreckage were thrown against a telegraph pole, causing a breakage of the wires and rendering communication between the finain office here and the scene of the wreck difficult. A few minutes after the smashup the wrecked passenger cars caught fire, thus adding to the hor-

DISOBEDIENCE CAUSED A WRECK.

An Impatient Engineer on the Reading Road Killed With a Number of Others. PHILADELPHIA, PA., Oct. 24.-A bad wreck occurred on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad this morning about 9:10 o'clock. The scene of the accident is at West Manayunk, a suburb of this city, about ten miles distant. Inquiry at the offices of the officers of the road at Broad and Callowhill streets met with no entisfaction whatever.

The officers admitted that there had been a wreck, but refused point blank to give any further information or even the slightest de-tail. It was learned, however, that the wreck had taken fire and was burning rapidly in the

At noon President McLeod of the Reading system received a telegram from his representative at the scene of the wreck, stating as near as could be ascertained there were ten persons killed and fifteen injured. The ill-fated train was known as na

The ill-fated train was known as passenger No. 2, which leaves Shamokin at 5 a.m., Pottaville at 7 a.m. and Reading one hour later, and is due at the Broad and Callowhill streets station of the Reading Company at 9:30 a.m. The train is an express and makes but few stops between Reading and this city. It was running on the north-bound track, the south-bound track being in use between Conshehocton and West being in use between Conshohocton and West Falls for other traffic.

AN ENGINEER DISORETED CRDERS. The track had been ordered clear for No. 2 and that train was rushing southward toward Philadelphia when, at a few minutes after 9 f-ssional duties, but at no one time was he absent more than half an hour. He frankly admitted to the newspaper men who thronged about him whenever he appeared outside the mansion that the time of Mrs. Harrison's death was only a question of a few hours and that his efforts were devoted solely to making ordered to lie at Pencoyd station, a short distance south of the scene of the the accident and willing hands quickly extri-cated from the mass of wreckage the dead, dying and mained passengers. Up to noon fifteen injured persons had been removed to St. Timothy's Hospital at Roxborough, a short distance away. Ten dead bodies had been taken charge of by undertakers and this was reported to be the extent of the casualties re-sulting from the disobedience of his orders by the engineer of No. 538.

It is now said that seven were killed. The killed are: Thomas Welsh, fireman of engine

INFORMING THE ABSENT CABINET OFFICERS.
Quite early in the official morning Mr. Halford telegraphed a brief statement of Mrs. Harrison's actual condition to those members of the cabinet who are out of town. Replies have been received from Secretary John W. Foster of the State Department and Secretary Rusk, and both of them are now on their way to this city. Secretary Elkins and Secretary Charles Foster of the Treasury are ready to start at any moment.

Mrs. Harrison, as low as she was at noon time, was still conscious. A little before that the President, leaning over her, asked if she wished
